The intersection

There will be therefore a 'here and now' that is made of both the past (experience) and the future (aspiration). An opportunity will be made available where the visitor can witness that which worked and therefore imagine a future that he/she would prefer to inhabit.